

4TH OF JULY: AMERICA'S BIRTHDAY BASH AT KALEIDEUM

A social narrative courtesy of BrightBridge ABA

On Saturday, I'm going to Kaleideum for a special event with my family.

When I walk in the building, I will first see this desk. My grown up will need to stop at this desk to check me in.

Check in will not take longer but I will need to be patient and wait for my grown up to walk past this desk.

I can explore and play at Kaleideum if I follow the rules.

Rules:

1. I will stay with my grown up.
2. I will use my walking feet.
3. I will take turns with friends.
4. I will clean up after I play.

My grown up and I will go into the digital dome to watch quiet fireworks.

I will sit in my seat and look up at the fireworks and colors.

If I do not want to see the fireworks, I can tell my grown up I want to leave.

After the fireworks, I will go outside to see the bike parade.

I can decorate my bike and take it if I want to.

There may be policemen and women to help keep us safe.

I can say “hi” to them too.

I can play in the different parts of the museum if I stay with my grown up.

These are some of the things I might see while I am there.

I will see exciting things but it's important to remember to stay with my grown up and follow the rules to use walking feet.

It's important that I listen to my grown up when it is time to go. Sometimes it's hard to leave when I'm having fun but I can always come visit my friends at Kaleideum again!
